The Marysville (Cal.) Herald, of a recent date,

The gambler produced a Colt's revolver, and stepping to the place marked with a cross-chalk, declared himself ready. The other took his position, offering the other end of a silk handkerchief, and at the same time drawing from his belt a bowie knife, declaring himself ready, and requested a bystander to give the word. The spectators, panic struck at the despera-A SPECIAL MEETING OF THE STOCKHOLDERS tion of the men, crowded back to the wall, without offering the least opposition to the murderous fight, tion of the men, crowded back to the wall, without combatants stood waiting for the word, looking steadily in each Other's eyes, and apparently without the quivering of a nerve. The word was given, and the gambler's pistol snapped! At the same time his ansagonist struck a fearful blow at his neck, which would have severed his head from his shoulders, had not some one touched his elbow and diverted the knife, which passed over the gambler's shoulder and cut a dreadful gash in his back. At this moment the lookers on, having recovered from their surprise, sprang forward and separated the men, and ended the fight.

Letter from John Phonix, We find in the New Orleans Picayune, a letter from the inimitable humorist, John Phænix, a portion of which we copy. After mentioning the probable defeat of the bill before Congress, which provides for an increase of army officers pay, he introduces a project of his own, as follows: Basing my views on this supposition, it appearing evident that Congress is not going to help us in any other way, I have a project to submit, which I think must be approved by the army, the Government, and the people at large. It is well known that, within the last few years, gunny bags, flour sacks, and the lighter articles of clothing, have increased greatly in price, and that still the supply is by no means equal to the demands. I propose, then, that the Senate, (failing to pass the present bill for the increase of pay,) should make a small appropriation ($100,000 would do) for furnishing each officer of the army with one of the newly invented patent sewing machines, which would place in his hands at once an easy, pleasant and profitable method of increasing his means of subsistence. These machines should be of the "Grover & Baker" patent, and colored to correspond to the different corps d'armee.

Thus we would have red machines for the artillery, blue for the infantiy, medium green for the rifles, and deep or very green for all brevet second lieutenants. Dragoons and officers troubled with rheumatism, gout, &c., to be furnished with the box putern; all others, capable of using their legs, to receive the middle machine. Then the army, like the sover in the parable, would "go forth to sew." To avoit interference in business, or overstocking the market with any particular article, the different corps should confine themselves to the manufacture of such garments as their previous occupation would render the most easy and agreeable. From their employment they might also derive new and more expressive

Thus the artillery, accustomed to making breaches, could readily manufacture pantaloons, and might be called the 1st, 2nd, 3d and 4th Trowserloons; the infantry, used to the sack of cities and fortified towns, could make gunny bags, and should be termed the 1st, 2nd, &c., Gunny Baggers; while the cavalry and dragoons, long accustomed to resort to every shift for a living, could readily produce shirts, and an awning post, and put the other hand behind him, Light Muslin, or the Linen Bosoms. The engineers, speaking in the same low, calm voice, "you dare familiar with the best method of throwing up breastnot follow me out !" The man sprang toward him, works, would be the corset makers; the topographiture drawers and the ordnance, to whom making

All the papers say the people highly approve the increase of the army pay, but as Congress won't do are not slow coaches in telling long yarns. During that, if they will only give us the machines, the peodiem, which, at twenty cents a piece, would be equal to the pay of the members of Congress, before they
